

JAN NORMAN ON SMALL BUSINESS

News and practical tips for Orange County small business owners

« Previous Post

All Posts

What's with the pink RV?

August 6th, 2010, 4:00 am · 1 Comment · posted by Jan Norman, small-business columnist

Irvine accountant Wayne Pinnell isn't the kind of guy you'd expect to see drive around Orange County in a 40-foot, pink recreational vehicle. But he does several times a week.

Haskell & White's Race for the Cure RV

It's one of the ways Pinnell, who is managing partner at the Irvine accounting firm of Haskell & White LLP, is promoting the Komen Race for the Cure in Orange County, which this year will be Sept. 26 in Newport Beach.

He's a "pink tie guy," a group of men who are selected to advocate for the organization's mission and extend support in the business community. Also, cancer hits close to the Haskell & White family, he says.

Five people in the firm, including founding partner Steve Haskell, have been diagnosed with cancer. Four have died.

As Pinnell and his colleagues discussed ways to promote the race, he volunteered his personal 40-foot recreational vehicle to be a water stop at the race. One thing led to another and he was having the RV vinyl-wrapped half in pink for Susan G. Komen for the Cure Orange County and half in tan with Haskell & White's logo.

It's introduction was Huntington Beach's Independence Day race.

"Since I had it wrapped, I drive it to work a couple of times a week and park it in our parking lot at Irvine Spectrum," Pinnell says. "The Irvine Company has been terrific about letting me do that. I let them know when I'll be driving it to work and they put out white cones and chains for a parking spot."

Hilary Kaye, the firm's public relations consultant, has set up a Twitter feed @ThePinkRV where Pinnell lets followers know where the vehicle will be next, and a Facebook page.

"For me, it's for fun and a different way to get the word out," Pinnell says. "I get a lot of ribbing but then I can explain about breast cancer awareness."

The RV won't be wrapped in pink forever, he says, which is of interest to other charities with which he is involved. Laura's House, for which he is chairman, is already wondering about a moving ad for the battered women's shelter.